

It's YOUR society: strategic planning for the American Physical Society

Abstract:

I will summarize some major activities and strategic plans of the American Physical Society, including: publishing research while opening access; advocating in Washington for funding for research and new initiatives, fostering education, and supporting appropriate immigration policies for graduate students from other countries; engaging more physicists who are in the private sector; expanding outreach to grow and diversify our profession; and articulating what our members consider to be ethical conduct. Over the last year, a strategic planning process has engaged hundreds of APS members. Your feedback on the resulting strategy is sought, and implementation of the best new ideas can engage all of us.
